Reflection

In A1 I planned for my website to be able to compete with the best web designers to ever do it, but once I got to figure out how hard web design is, I was not able to fully achieve the goals that I set for myself in A1. Even though my original goal for this website did not end up working out I still think that I created a phenomenal website, and I am very proud of everything I have learned this semester. I like that my website is simplistic but still has all the features needed and is still accessible to anyone. Even though my website is simplistic I think is still quite a professional website and I can and will use it as what it's intended for. The intention for my website is to show any future projects that I work on and for people who are interested in hiring me for projects to be able to reach out to me easily. I think I accomplished that goal and I will be putting this website to use.
